The State of Texas passed an amendment to the Texas Education Code law that requires state colleges and universities to advise admission applicants concerning diseases preventable by vaccines, such as diphtheria, rubeola, rubella, mumps, tetanus and poliomyelitis. We are concerned about your health while you are enrolled with the University of North Texas. The following information is important:

■ MEASLES (rubeola, Red Measles, Hard Measles, 10-Day Measles) is a highly contagious viral disease. Antibiotics are not effective as treatment. Recent outbreaks of this illness have included many hospitalizations and several deaths among college-aged people. Because of this, it is recommended that students have two doses of the vaccine prior to beginning college classes instead of just one, which most young people have. The measles vaccine most often is given in combination with the vaccines for mumps and rubella, which are also caused by viruses.

■ TETANUS (lockjaw) is an illness caused from the poison produced by a bacteria and is a very difficult illness to treat once it occurs. Prevention is the most appropriate choice. The vaccine today is effective for about 10 years, at which time a booster shot is given. It is now common for older adults in the United States to develop tetanus because many adults do not seek the recommended 10-year boosters. The tetanus vaccine should be given in combination with the diphtheria vaccine.

■ POLIOMYELITIS immunization is not routinely recommended for persons 18 years old or older. However, if travel to other countries is planned, a physician should be contacted for specific recommendations.

Although these immunizations are not required, the University of North Texas strongly recommends that you contact your physician or public health clinic to make sure that your immunizations are current before you enroll.

It is the policy of the University of North Texas not to discriminate on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, age, national origin, disability (where reasonable accommodations can be made), disabled veteran status, or veteran of the Vietnam era status in its educational programs, activities, admissions, or employment policies. In addition to complying with federal and state equal opportunity laws and regulations, the university through its diversity policy declares harassment based on individual differences (including sexual orientation) inconsistent with its mission and educational goals.
