Bureau of Labor Statistics Information

Management Analyst (<http://www.bls.gov/oco/ocos019.htm>)

- Despite fast employment growth, keen competition is expected for jobs; opportunities should be best for those with a graduate degree, specific industry expertise, and a talent for salesmanship and public relations.
- About 29 percent, more than 3 times the average for all occupations, are self-employed.
- Most positions in private industry require a master's degree and additional years of specialized experience; a bachelor's degree is sufficient for entry-level government jobs.

Labor Relations Specialist (<http://www.bls.gov/oco/ocos021.htm>)

- In filling entry-level jobs, many employers seek college graduates who have majored in human resources, human resources administration, or industrial and labor relations; other employers look for college graduates with a technical or business background or a well-rounded liberal arts education.
- For many specialized jobs, previous experience is an asset; for more advanced positions, including those of managers, arbitrators, and mediators, it is essential.
- Keen competition for jobs is expected because of the plentiful supply of qualified college graduates and experienced workers.

Management Consultant (<http://www.bls.gov/oco/cg/cgs037.htm>)

- This industry ranks among the fastest growing through the year 2014; however, job competition should remain keen, with the most educated and experienced workers having the best job prospects.
- This industry is one of the highest paying.
- About 25 percent of all workers are self-employed.
- About 72 percent of workers have a bachelor's or higher degree; 59 percent of all jobs are in managerial, business, financial, and professional occupations.
